

[illegible]

Method and system of securely managing EEPROM data files in order to restore data after abortion of a write operation, the data being stored in a record-oriented data structure with each of the records containing a status byte in addition to the data contents.